Andrew Dewar was born in Toronto, Ontario, and graduated from Ryerson Polytechnic Institute (B.A. Journalism) and University of Toronto (M.A. Japanese Studies, Library and Information Science) before moving to Japan in 1988. After completing his doctoral studies in library science at Keio University, he joined the faculty of a junior college in Japan. Soon after arriving in Japan he rediscovered his childhood love of designing and flying paper airplanes. His passion for paper airplanes led him to become president of the Fukushima Paper Airplane Club. Dewar has published over 30 paper crafting books and kits. He also teaches paper airplane workshops and does seminars at schools, libraries, community centers and museums. He lived and taught library science in Fukushima, Japan, until the giant earthquake and nuclear accident in March 2011, when the city became unsafe. After a brief stay in Canada, he's returned with his family to Gifu, Japan.

I haven't had time to try the projects in this book since purchasing it, however, there are a lot of great ideas in it. These projects are great for family members to bond over on a rainy day, clever ideas for party favors for a kid's party theme, easy to read and follow instructions.

Having completed a varied selection of the charming productions, these perceptions are offered: The die-cut projects were successfully constructed, by carefully following the instructions and working neatly for optimum results. Caution, adult assistance may be needed if the toys are to be assembled by children, because patience as well as practice in working with simple tools, would likely be helpful. In addition to the ingenious designs themselves, the educational and entertaining editorial commentary was appreciated. Obviously artist Andrew Dewar has a fine sense-of-humor!
