California-based JOE YOGERST first explored Venice in the winter of 1986 and over the years has experienced the city in every season. His writing has appeared in Conde Nast Traveler, Travel + Leisure, CNN Travel, BBC Travel, the International Herald Tribune, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and many other publications. Yogerst has worked on more than a dozen National Geographic book projects including Long Road South, his Lowell Thomas Award-winning account of a three-month journey along the Pan American Highway between Texas and Argentina. Australian travel writer and photographer GILLIAN PRICE has been a resident of waterlogged Venice for over 35 years - and never takes it for granted. She spends much of the year exploring Italy on foot and with public transport for her many walking guidebooks.

concise book, and i am ready to walk venice. very informative, as the book is broken down into tours of neighborhoods; tours if you only have about 12 hours. each section talks about a specific area. it has insider tips as well.

If your are thinking about Venice this is THE book that you need to plan a truly successful and memorable trip

Can't wait to take some of these walks. Very well illustrated and organized.

useful during Venice visit

This guidebook contains information new to me even though I have visited Venice several times before. I am looking forward to putting this new knowledge to work when I travel back to Venice later this summer.

Great handbook for Venice

Was a gift, but the recipient was happy

great info
