This claims to be an audio-only course, but it gives you new vocabulary on the CD without definitions. The first CD is unlike the others. The person pronouncing the Spanish does it too quickly and sometimes, not so clearly. After the first CD, the quality of the audio sounds like a cassette, not even a tape. This is a poor way to learn a language. There are better audio courses out there.

This was the worse choice that I could have made. I tried using the CD's and had to quit after less than 30 minutes.

Very hard to understand

Really lots of fun! Great background music makes it nice to listen to, plus easy to register "sound/word assoc" in my head. Even if particular segment might not be what you want to learn, or, if you've mastered that conversation, it's easy to queue forward to the segment you want. Gives alternative inferences, plus different local specifics (i.e. Europe vs Cen America).

The first CD was helpful because it really broke down the words for you and repeated it to help you remember. The rest were basically worthless the instructor spoke way too fast and they tried to throw way too much at you at once. Didn't really learn anything save your money

The 1st disk was easy to follow. When starting the second disc I felt like I had missed a lot of information. Also starting with the second disc they give very little explanation on what they are trying to teach you.

I'll admit - languages come easily to me. So I figured that learning Spanish in the car wouldn't be too hard, and that I could pick up the written portions as I went along (I mostly wanted tourist-oriented dialogue, anyway). Disc 1 was great. They presented words - repeated 3 times with time for you to repeat, then sentences, then variations on the same sentence. By the end, you understand how to form a basic sentence, ask a basic question, and give an answer. This format was great! Then disc two starts. Every word is only said once. Some of them are never even used in following examples. There's no theme (The first disc was focused on describing a car/van and objects you see while driving). You learn the alphabet, then conjugate a verb, then learn some random "work" vocabulary, then a little about the weather, then how to ask for directions - all in less than an hour. I'm really trying to keep up with this, but I feel like I'm just parroting sounds rather than learning a language - there isn't enough repetition for my brain to start making the connections and finding the patterns that happen when you truly start to understand a new language.
